

Rookie Improvements

Weekly Report 4 09/10/18 to 09/17/18

The work ethic for the week was highly influenced by the quantity of assignments. With this acknowledgement of how many assignments needed to be completed focus, time management, and effort all were solid like Patrick Mahomes on Sunday. Most of each class was spent focused on each assignment thus displayed in the quality that was turned in. This week displayed great improvements, and the handling of a variety of work is essential for Sports marketing, and their diverse tasks. One main challenge that limited me was the ability to improve on my mistakes in my past assessments. Although I improved, it's nowhere near perfect. Similarly work ethic needs to always get better, in order to have success in all subjects.

After glancing at the calendar, assignment based goals for the week include creating an appealing website that really displays who I am and my interest in Sports Marketing. More importantly, although no grades are due I intend on keeping up focus and managing time wisely. This will translate into a potential career in sports marketing, as research showed that jobs could be based on sports being in-season. With the practice of these skills I intend to begin my assessment four and get a good chunk complete. Doing assignments early shall allow more time for pressing matters such as tests coming up.

Throughout the week new information I learned, was how to properly write interview questions. These interview questions is almost like reverse preparation for jobs as I can anticipate questions that I will be asked. My main goals were to manage time and fix past mistakes on assignments which I skillfully did. Weekly improvement should translate to my other classes thus benefiting me completely, but so far I still struggle with procrastination. The time to start searching for professionals is near, so until that time, the plan is to master or at least solidify professional encounters.